

SARS-Cov2 Information ZKRD

Germany doesn't have any specific regulation as far as SARS-CoV-2 vaccination and stem cell donation is concerned. In 2023 remaining COVID restrictions were eliminated, and there is currently no national requirement to test donors for SARS-CoV-2. However in the interest of donor safety, testing can still take place. Donors continue to be assessed for risk of infection when requested for verification typing, a health and availability check or a workup. This is in accordance with national guidelines of the German Medical Board as well as our national standards, and applies to other infectious diseases as well.
