Data upload service (Pydio)

Our new data upload service is almost ready again for our users to upload test XML files. We expect that we can open the service for users at the end of the week.

Please be aware that this service is running on a staging environment and developers are also still working on some features. Therefore, you might experience changes over time.

- If you already uploaded data through the test upload platform (Pydio) before, you will receive information how you can login to the new service.
- If you haven't used the test upload platform before, but you have a test XML ready for upload, you can request login details by sending an email to support@bmdw.org

We will update you as soon as the service is available.